

MISSION STATEMENT

Independent. Pluto was founded in 1969 as an independent publisher. We will remain independent of any political party, organisation, or corporation.

Radical. Pluto is committed to radical social, political and economic transformation of the current global order, and an end to all forms of exploitation and oppression. Our publishing draws upon and critically engages with traditions including Marxism, feminism, anti-imperialism, socialism, anti-racism, and anarchism. Our work illuminates, explains and critically analyses those injustices that exist, and contributes meaningfully to the development of alternative visions for a better world.

Internationalist. Our solidarities are global. Our publishing crosses borders not only in subject matter and perspective, but also in terms of the authors we work with, the partnerships that we form, and the readerships we reach. Our vision of politics is one where the fate of each individual is bound up in the lives of all others.

Rigorous. We adhere to the highest standards of intellectual rigour, critical thinking and scholarly integrity, publishing cutting-edge and engaging work from inside and outside the academy. We strive to achieve this in a way that does not reproduce or reinforce oppressive hierarchies of knowledge production, and that generates knowledge which is of practical use both to scholars and to the movements with which we are aligned.
